I am pleased to announce the launch of Clinical Medicine Reviews in Patient Care, a new journal published by Clinical Medicine Reviews.

Clinical Medicine Reviews in Patient Care is an international, peer-reviewed scholarly journal that focuses on concise rapid reporting of clinical studies across all therapeutic areas. This journal seeks to recognize the growing importance of patient preference and adherence throughout the therapeutic continuum, outcomes, safety, and the effective, safe, and sustained use of medicines.

Clinical Medicine Reviews in Patient Care is published by Clinical Medicine Reviews, a new publisher of journals in the clinical medicine area. Clinical Medicine Reviews aims to become a provider of timely and highly reliable research in the area of patient care. It follows that rigorous editorial standards are applied to ensure that information provided to readers meets our high editorial standards. Articles will follow a consistent format so that the visual impact will be high and equal to that of the best hard-copy publications.

We expect to soon publish articles on topics including:

- A patient preference comparison of Dexlansoprazole delayed release capsules vs Ranitidine in gastroesophagel reflux disease
- Pharmacotherapy of breakthrough pain in opioid-treated patients: focus on Fentanyl Buccal Tablet
- Pharmacotherapy of schizophrenia in adolescents: safety and efficacy of Risperidone
